

Razor Ramdoo

Hey my baby Slobber
Today is a year now since you have gone to the angels. My heart is hollow and feels empty ever since without you. I feel like I'm a walking dead just empty inside.....For the remaining part of what's left of me will never know what exactly happened to you on this very day and why, why, why you my boy.

I should have been the one who should have died not you. I am the sick one I'm still on treatment but you didn't get the chance.... You was so full of life, energetic why was there no signs??? I miss you Wuzzer. We all love and miss you. You really know who we are...i pray that you will give me the strength in you. There's never a day that Sasha stops talking about you. She draws all the time and leaves your picture by your table. I know you're the one giving Tanya that push in the right direction for her singing and also to become a vet. She had it tough with these memories you know what I'm talking about.

So I know you're beside her all the way, and as for the dog whisperer you know who this is. Never misses one days walk for the rest of the gang. Watch over them, we nearly had a scare from Poopy and Rex's but they're ok now. Tyson is now losing his patience with Poops game as you know well enough about that game.

I miss our chats and daily tackle and not forgetting your howlings and your beautiful smile showing me all your teeth. I would say to you "You're Ugly" as a joke and you would smile so much more. But now I would give anything to see your smile again.

Love you Slobber
Together Forever xxxx