Zoe had a massive effect on everyone who met her, she really was beautiful and people fell in love with her.
Zoe also qualified as a visiting pets as therapy dog, visiting the elderly and those with dementia, she brought many smiles to their faces and she enjoyed the biscuits she got in return.

As Zoe got into her senior years her arthritis and spondylosis needed management and the perfect solution for our long walks was to get her a pushchair.

Zoe could walk for as long as she wanted then get into the pushchair to rest while still being able to take in the sights and smells which she thoroughly enjoyed.
And when swimming become too much to do, she loved the warm baths and massages to relax and ease her joints and the pampering of being hair-dried afterwards.
